P. N. TARKAN,--Stations. Several buyers are desirous of investing in a steadily paying sheep station, but vendors are very particular and do not care to sell for less than $100,000. We hope to see some satisfactory business.

W. J. TARKAN,--Stations. Several buyers are desirous of having some stations inspected, and hope to report sales showing a profit. The sheep stations are generally well stocked, and at moderate prices but are occasionally to be found, having a New England station inspected with a good profit.

Southern rail yard.—Store Cattle: No movement yet; must wait until the fall season opens. The bulk of the stock on hand will be ready for the market. Prices for fat bullocks range from 40c to 50c, according to age and quality. Fat calves are selling at 60c to 70c. Weathers are 30c to 40c. Prices range from .75 to $1.00; wethers are worth 50c to 75c. Fat cattle: Prices continued firm, and we may reasonably expect some improvement in prices during the winter months. At 11c per head, the best yards brought from 10c to 12c per lb. Fat sheep remain without alteration. The best shorn lambs at present are at 18c to 20c fleece, up to 12 lbs. light weights, in proportion.—October 12.

Jones Newry.—Fat Cattle: The supply of prime lots was small, and the market was well supplied by the remainder of the lot from $9.50 to $7.75 for all descriptions, or up to 10c per 100 lbs. the best beef. Fat Sheep: The full grown lots offered yesterday were sold at 11c per head, and the yearlings at 10c. Wethers were obtained, but none good 60-65 wethers, unshorn, were sold at 75c to $1.00. Still the market must be reported rather quieter than usual, because of the numbers likely to be sent down after shearing commences.

WILLIAM KOWAL.—Fat Cattle: The supply this week was about equal to requirements, there was not much change in Monday's prices. Choice steers were $10.75; good, $9.75; fair, $8.75; various rates. Best beef was worth 16¢ to 17¢ per 100 lbs. There was a fair number were sent in, best weights are worth, in season, $10.00; good, $9.00; fair, $8.00; culls, $7.00; and down to $5.00, in proportion. Milch Cows: To-day's sales were about the same as ever held, only very low prices offered for the best cows.

[illegible][illegible]

We also reported that the highest prices realized for grade butterfat were $6.00 per cwt. The values ranging from $3d to 64d per lb. Tallow declined fully 5c per ton.

The Chicago stock market held over five better values. We cleared our catalogue at prices ranging from 71c to 82¢ per lb. We sold for mixed lots, and to fill orders for 100 lbs. and half met with a ready sale at satisfactory prices.—October 14.

CATTLE AND SWINE.—Stations: No sales to report this morning. At the Chicago stock yards, a number of those lots were yarded on Monday, and 392 on Thursday, 63 of these being withdrawn. And the bulk of the cattle forward were from good to extra good. Prime bullocks are worth $5 10c to $5 15c; extra good to $7 10c. Fat Sheep: 11,357 forward. Good to extra good, $5 10c to $5 15c. Yearling calves: 1,000 forward. Cattle, weathers, $5 10c to 10c; good dirt, 74-60 to 75c. Very few wool sheep now. The few lots offered were only of medium quality and no more than 100 lbs. each. There was no business in lambs and young ewes. We have also had several inquiries for names.

MELBOURNE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

MELBOURNE, TUESDAY.

The much vexed question whether the Exhibition is to be opened at night or not is yet unsettled, though the Commission here is determined that it shall be open if they can possibly manage it. Invitations to the number of 7000 have been issued for a conversation, to be held on Thursday evening next, when the entertainment will include a promenade-concert; and the avowed object of the gathering is to convince those who draw their objections, but the dissenters—notably the British and Foreign Commissioners—and exhibitors carry their opposition to such an extent that they declare they will not allow their exhibits to be open, even on Thursday night. For instance, it is positively affirmed that in the event of the conversation being given, the British Art Court will be entirely closed; and the British and Foreign Commissioners have addressed a strong remonstrance to the Melbourne Commission on the subject, as they regard the affair of Thursday night as the introduction of this side of the wedge into a matter that they cannot approve of. The Victorian Commissioners, however, assert that the proceedings of Thursday shall not be taken as a precedent in any way, to prejudice the general question, and they propose a general conference, to order to discuss and if possible settle the matter; and thus it stands at present.

Sir Henry Parkes visited the Exhibition yesterday, and was shown round by Dr. Renwick. Our Premier expressed his high approval of the exhibition at New South Wales, and more especially of the exposition of the natural resources.

There is one matter in which the Victorian Commissioners have shown themselves far ahead of the authorities of our Exhibition at Sydney—I mean in regard to the issue of the general catalogue, which has been in the hands of the public for some time. The catalogue consists of two octavo volumes, the first containing about 800 pages. The first volume specifies the exhibits of all the Australian colonies, New Zealand, India, China, Japan, the United States, and the West Indies; vol. 2 enumerates the contributions from Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, and other foreign countries. The second volume is an interesting introductory notice of the country and colony in question, and from the quantity of valuable information it contains the catalogue will be worth preserving, both as a record of the Exhibition and as a work of reference.

The corner allotted to New South Wales in the machinery shed, which has hitherto been almost empty, now looks a little more lively. Messrs. Hudson, Brothers, are busily engaged in erecting their sleeping carriage, similar to those already in use on the New South Wales railway lines. The carriage is not yet unpacked, but I notice that the workmen are engaged in preparing for it by laying a section of trackway line with rails, coal sets, and Mr. Evans's self-winding points, just such as is in use in Sydney. This will be completed in a day or two, and then the car will be set up on its own.

Sir Simonetta's statue, "Mercy" and "Justice," have been placed in the committee of the New South Wales principal Court in the annex, and they are much admired.

Dr. Renwick, Mr. H. Burdett Smith, Mr. C. J. Roberts, and Mr. C. E. Hotham left for Sydney yesterday. Mr. Jules Joubert is now the sole representative of the official staff of New South Wales.

Sherry as the exhibition comes before us at first sight, a closer inspection reveals the presence of many articles of more than ordinary interest, as representing the true sources of national wealth and progress. Gold mining, as the largest industry of the colony, naturally occupies the most prominent place in the exhibition, and in the form of the gigantic crystal which represents the total quantity of gold raised throughout the colony. Bendigo has a pyramid showing the aggregate yield from the mines in that locality. It represents something like eleven million ounces, equal to a value of about 44 millions sterling. The pyramid is a whole of the gold as it was brought to light in New South Wales. In further illustration of the wonderful richness of the Sandhurst district there are other models representing in bulk the quantity raised in various mines, and the quantity yielded by some of the most valuable mines. Samples of quartz from different claims in that locality are shown, with buttons of the gold refined from the quartz. The Pleasant Creek Cross Reef Company, of Stawell, exhibit a trophy representing in large proportions the produce of their mine in ten years—nearly 300,000 ounces; and many other claims of lesser size are represented in the same way. The geological formation known as a saddle reef is exemplified by a large model, some thirty feet in height, which also shows the manner in which such a reef is worked. But the best idea of the method in which gold-mining operations are carried on is to be gained by inspection of a series of smaller models. The peculiar illustration both alluvial working and quartz reefing, especially as these exhibits contain models of the machinery and apparatus employed, with figures of the miners at work. In the alluvial workings you see a party engaged in stripping the surface stuff and getting out the washdirt, and in another part of the model you see the subsequent operations of separating the gold. In the model of the quartz reef the top of the shaft is shown, with the winding gear, a short distance of the quartz is being carried away to the crushing-machine, while on one side a party of men are seen preparing the surface stuff, and on the other side a party of men are seen working the shaft in a panning machine. Besides these there are a number of drawings and models, some of which show the manner in which the gold is separated from the waste, and in another part of the model you see the subsequent operations of separating the gold. A very interesting set of exhibits from the Melbourne Mint is shown. This institution was established here about eight years ago, and up to the beginning of the present year gold coin to the value of no less than thirteen and a half millions has been issued. The department shown here in operation is of Napier's automatic weighing machine, driven by a turbine water-wheel. This delicate apparatus is used for weighing and sorting the "blanks," or circular discs, which when afterwards impressed with the necessary stamp form sovereigns and half-sovereigns. The blanks are placed in a kind of trough at the top of the machine, into which they drop by their own weight. The apparatus weighs them, and drops the light ones on one side, and the heavy ones on the other, while those that are exactly of the standard weight fall into a third receptacle, from which they are taken to be stamped into perfect coins with a special die. The stamped and milled edges, complete; while the faulty ones go back to the melting-pot, to be recast. This machine is in many respects similar to the one that was exhibited nearly under the dome of the Garden Palace; but it contains several improvements introduced by Mr. Stott, the balance mechanism of the Melbourne Mint. Near this is a cube representing the bulk of gold, equal to a million sterling of standard gold, or 256,821 oz. troy. Next to this is a cube showing the bulk equal to the same value in fine gold, or 255,420 oz. All gold, whether used for coinage or for jewellery purposes, requires to be mixed with some base metal, in order to make it hard enough to resist the wear and tear it is subject to. Standard gold is mixed with copper, and here we have a cube representing the 21,401 oz. of copper contained in the million pound cube of this kind of gold. Fine gold is mixed with silver, and a cube is shown equal to 10,398 oz. of silver contained in the million pound block of fine gold. An exceedingly delicate balance is shown, which will weigh to the ten-thousandth part of a grain, acting on the compensation principle. This apparatus was also constructed by the balance-maker of the establishment. There is here a press for cutting out blanks, and over press, fitted with dies made at the Mint. Samples are shown of the

GLEN INNES AND ITS NEIGHBOURHOOD.

The climate at Glen Innes, and in fact all over the district, is magnificent, and the winter season is especially charming to all who love cold mornings and nights and a bright genial sunshine through the hours of the day. Snow falls occasionally, and, of course, rain; but generally winter is attended by nothing more than frost and ice, and these beautify everything. To see the fields in their white covering when the sun is slowly rising; to listen to the musical notes of the magpies, perched on some of the fences, or looking for their morning meal where the plough has been; to observe how every pond and every corner of a stream, where the water is away from the current, is thickly coated with carefully formed geometrical figures in ice, and to listen as the feet of horses and the wheels of vehicles crash the ice as they pass over it, are experiences altogether new to a stranger in the district, and very interesting. Two months ago it was difficult to pour from a water jug in the morning sufficient water to wash one's face, and when that which was to be obtained from the jug was turned into a basin little lumps of ice formed instantly all round the basin rim. It was no uncommon thing for a jug to be brought to the coach from the bar of a roadside inn, with its contents so frozen that the ice had to be broken by a violent thrust before any water could be obtained from the vessel, and even the milk jug at a breakfast table was sometimes in almost the same condition. The people of the town and district are said to work the mines in the neighbourhood with interest, but they consider they have not been treated by the "powers that be" with the consideration which the richness and importance of this part of the colony justify. If I remember rightly, one complaint that was made to me was that the town had never been visited by a Minister of the Crown since the late Mr. Macdonald left it well to travel north as far as Armidale; and this reminiscence on the part of Ministers was regarded as one reason why the wants of the town of Glen Innes were not better attended to. Country towns are always glad to see a member of the Government visiting them, and are invariably ready to pay him homage by preceding him with an address—or entertaining him at a banquet—though the homage is generally more to the great man's power with the Estimates than to his public character or services; but Glen Innes has not yet had even the chance of doing anything of the kind.

Probably if the resources of the district were more widely known, the Government would be taken to its wells and capitalists would turn their attention to the rich mineral deposits that exist there. It is upon the mineral riches of the district that the townspeople of Glen Innes believe their progress and prosperity in the future chiefly depend. The principal portion of the rich tin fields of New England are within thirty miles of the place, though, unfortunately for Glen Innes, the town at present reaps very little benefit from the tin mining, for at Vegetable Creek there is every provision for business, both in regard to the purchase of stores and banking transactions; and the tin traffic between the mines there and the seaboard passes by Glen Innes at a distance as great as to prevent the town receiving any advantage from it. But, in addition to the deposits of tin ore, the district is understood to be rich in gold-bearing quartz reefs, and there are also such minerals as bluish, nickel, and silver. The last-named, however, is principally near the lake, where a very little tin has been taken with the gold. It has been in many other places, it requires capital to work them, and the attention of capitalists in their disposition to invest money has not yet been attracted to any particular extent in this direction. Glen Innes looks forward to the time when there will be sufficient enterprise and money available to make the most of these rich resources.

There is a good display of copper and copper ores from Bethungas, and a schist manganese ore, from Walhalla. The largest sample of coal in the Victorian Court is to be found in this section. They come from Gippsland and from Cape Patterson, and are said to burn well, though both samples are very small, and are for one moment to be compared with the New South Wales coal. A little one containing specimens of polished stone, somewhat resembling agates, from Riddell's Creek, is worth inspection. The colours are very varied and beautiful, but they are distinguished from the true agates by losing their brilliancy of tint after being exposed to the light for some time.

Among the alimentary products not yet mentioned are samples of wheat and flour from almost every part of the colony, besides oats, barley, malt, rye, and other cereals. There are also large quantities of oatmeal, maize, starch, arrowroot, and other productions of the same nature. The quality of these exhibits is uniformly good, and they are mostly got up very neatly for the market. Mr. H. Barry shows some very creditable samples of fine and coarse salt, made by the evaporation process at the salt lakes in the Western District. A special reference to the exhibits of Messrs. B. Harper & Co. may be made, for the simple reason that this firm are now engaged in establishing in Sydney the very same manufacture that they have for a long time carried on with success in Melbourne. Their productions are somewhat varied, but they may be divided into two classes—those in which the raw material is imported, and those in which the raw material is produced in the colony. The first class may be said to include coffee, cocoa, rice, pepper, sugar, &c., while the second class includes mustard, marmalade, chutney, oatmeal, &c. This firm have had a large space allotted to them in the main avenue, not far from the New South Wales Court. In the centre is the large storehouse, and on either side are the various departments. The goods they exhibited in the Garden Palace, though the articles shown are differently arranged. In the revolving portion of the case are shown the packages, ready for sale, of the various articles they manufacture, while all around are to be seen the materials used, in all stages, from the raw state up to the finished article. A similar arrangement is made for all the other articles, and all around the sides of their pavilion, and there are several large trophies constructed of the tin and fanny packages in which the wares are put up for sale. It is well known that many articles such as coffee, spice, mustard, cocoa, and so on, are usually sold in a more or less adulterated state. Messrs. Harper & Co. are well known for their honesty and integrity, and they are determined to sell only pure articles, but as the public chose to have low-priced goods, in order to meet the competition of other makers they are compelled to offer adulterated goods for sale. But in all cases when they do this the label attached to the goods, thus for the defence, in regard to the quality of the goods, is in the hands of the public, and if the public insist on having coffee mixed with it the package is labelled "coffee with chicory." So with cocoa, mustard, and other goods. Cocoa is usually sold adulterated with farina and sugar, very much to the detriment of its nutritive and hygienic value. But Messrs.
